

Employee Counseling

Index Code: 302.4

Effective Date: 01/15/10 (Revised 10/31/16)

I. Purpose

The purpose of this directive is to provide supervisory personnel with the authority to impose counseling in response to employee performance or behavioral issues.

II. Policy

It is the policy of the Office of the Sheriff to establish and maintain a system for tracking, reviewing, and responding to employee actions that pose a potential risk to employees, the Office of the Sheriff, and the public. In addition to punitive actions such as fines and suspensions, counseling can be a helpful tool in assessing employee performance and providing intervention where appropriate.

III. General Guidelines

A. Whenever a complaint is received, whether originating internally or from the community, the Office of the Sheriff will respond, thoroughly investigate the incident, and determine if any necessary punitive or non-punitive actions are required.

B. Ideally, employee counseling is conducted as soon as possible following the behavior, performance or incident. All counseling sessions will be documented.

C. Counseling may be conducted by any supervisor in the employee's chain of command. When possible, especially in sessions with cross genders, the counseling should be conducted with an unbiased third party as a witness.

D. Counseling may be used for supervisor-initiated correction of observed subordinates' actions. Examples of when counseling may be appropriate include; employee lateness; disruptive comments or behavior; failure to respond to calls promptly; speeding or improper parking in a police vehicle; or other minor infractions that should be pointed out and corrected immediately.

E. Counseling may be used, at the discretion of the employee's division commander, for minor citizen-generated complaints where, after initial inquiry, the supervisor and division commander determine the incident does not warrant formal disciplinary action. Examples of when counseling may be appropriate for citizen-generated complaints include complaints of inappropriate conduct which do not rise to a level requiring a formal internal investigation, or complaints about an officer's attitude or demeanor.

F. Employees will be counseled at the conclusion of any rating period to include the results of the performance evaluation just completed.

G. Counseling may be used to address any poor performance identified during the last rating period, or any performance expected for the next rating period

H. Employees will be counseled at the conclusion of any rating period to include career counseling relative to such topics such as advancement, specialization, or training appropriate for the employee's position.

IV. Procedures

A. Supervisors will make an initial inquiry by listening to complainants, through personal observation, and/or by listening to other employees, and then determine whether the incident, if true, should be handled through the formal disciplinary process or through the use of counseling.

B. If the complaint originates from a citizen, the supervisor will inform the complainant that the complaint will be documented and the deputy counseled.

C. During the counseling session, the particular infraction is discussed by the counselor, pointing out specific deficiencies in the employee's performance, behavior, or attitude. Employees will be given a chance to express their views, verbally and/or in writing, regarding the incident which led to the counseling session, and to develop and recommend corrective measures. If the employee disagrees with the reason for counseling, or the action taken, the employee may document their disagreement.
